The story is based upon Carlyle's immortal line "Society is founded on Cloth," and is the sensational dramatic success that startied metropolitan society. It shows the powerful contrast of love and desire, sham and sincerity. There are four parts to this feature, and is interesting from start to finish. COLONIAL THEATRE.

"The Wedding Present," Sensational Two Reel Kleine Feature Film.

wonderful success The wonderful success of the George Kleine feature films that has dominated the career of the Colonial theatre is further enhanced by to-day's magnificent masterpiece entitled "The Wedding Present." It is a profound mystery drama of a most set of the Journal of Accountancy, in found mystery drama of a most unique type, and abounds in situa-tions that are positively thriling. It deals with high life and the glimpses deals with high life and the glimpses of the gorgeous festivities of the rich class are equalled only by the sumptuous settings before which the play is produced. Also for today is the brilliant tale of Snakeville, entitled "High Life Hits Slippery Slim." It will be remembered that Sophie, that flame of Alkali Ike's has found a newer love one with more length but newer love, one with more length but less avoirdupois, named Slippery Slim. The way she handles this poor apology for a man is a caution, and he, perfectly subservient to her wishes, proves a most pliant vehicle upon which and with which to give vent to her rage. Today's comedy is a sure winner and the balance of the bill will include The Light on the Well for include The Light on the Wall, featurstory of the Man Who Disappeared.

The film was produced inder the supervision of an U. S. Army officer and on the border of Mexice. The leading roles are portrayed by Herbert Rawlinson, formerly of the Selig company, and Miss Anna Little, the great lady expert rider from the Kay-Bee company. For a timely up-to-date picture that is extremely exciting this is a winner.

KANSAS WILL HEAR

INSURANCE COMPANIES' SIDE Before They Fulfill Threat to Withdraw From State.

Topeka, Kas., July 7.—The threat of fire insurance companies to withdraw from business in Kansas will not be carried out at present. The supreme court today decided the companies are entitled, under proceedings instituted a year ago, to have a hearing in the district court of Shawanes county as to whether insurance premium rates fixed by order of the superintendent of insurance are compensatory.

The companies maintain they have sucred a net loss of $1,500,000 in their business since 1909, when following the enactment of the Kansas law giving the superintendent of insurance power to regulate premium rates, sweeping reductions were made.

POETRY

EXTINCT MONSTERS.

Oh, had I lived in the good old days.
When the Ichthyosaurus ramped Would I have spent my precious time At weaving golden thoughts in rhyme?

When the Tinoceras snooped about,
And the Pterodactyl flopped its wings,
When the Brontops with the warty
snout
Noseyed around for herbs and things,
Would I have bothered myself o'er-About the measure, the muse and such?

The Dinotherium flourished then,
The Pierygotus lashed the seas;
The Ramphorhynchus prospered when
The Scaphbganthus perched in trees,
And every creature, wild and tame,
Rejoiced in some rococo name.

Pause and ponder, who could write
A triolet or roundelay
While a Megatherium yawped all night
And a Hesperornis yawped all day,
While now and then the bray sonorous
Of Glyptodon Asper swelled the chorus?

of Glyptodon Asper

If fate had made me anything
But a rhymster I'd have got along;
Those days of monstrous hoof and wing
Were not inspiring to lyric song.
So Nature reserved this tender bard
For the kindlier Age of Pork and Lard.
—Eugene Field.

NEW MOON.

Sail, wee sliver boat, into the west Over a wonder sea. Piloted safe by the evening star Freighted with dreams o' me.

Swift, alway, where thy crescent Wings Fincy after thee; Her arms full store the precious stuff Spun from the soul o' me.

For lo, thy boat is a cradle-craft
Where long lost children lie,
And she wraps them round in fairy weave
With an olden lullaby.
